Targeted. Feds move to crack down on mobile devices smuggled into prisons

Vednesday, August 29, 2012

Criminals who run their operations from behind bars using mobile devices could soon be left searching for cell service.

The federal government is asking companies how to stop prisoners from making calls on smuggled cellular and smartphones, tablets and other wireless devices. Such devices are banned in jails — but evidently, that hasn't stopped prisoners from getting hold of them.

"Though this prohibition is rigidly enforced, upon occasion, mobile devices are recovered by correctional officers from inmates within an institution," says a notice posted Tuesday on a government contracts website. "It is, therefore, of significant importance for (the Correctional Service of Canada) to develop an effective and sustainable method of preventing the use of mobile devices by inmates in support of its public safety mandate."

The Correctional Service could not immediately provide any statistics about the number of mobile devices that have been confiscated in jails. However, a written government response to a report by the House of Commons public-safety committee lists some ways jails try to keep out mobile devices, such as searches of immates and visitors, X-ray baggage scanners and metal detectors.

One avenue being explored is signal-jamming technology, which is banned in Canada because it can block emergency calls. Both the government's letter and the notice indicate an openness to signal-jamming tools, provided they don't interfere with 911 calls.

fere with 911 calls.

In the U.S., prisoners were found to be using phones to intimidate and threaten witnesses, send offensive photos to victims, orchestrate crimes, coordinate escapes, bribe prison guards and order retaliation against other inmates, a two-year-old FBI report says.

Redskins' name isn't racist, Barrhaven councillor says

Nepean football. Coun. Jan Harder maintains she's 'not in a position' to suggest local team find a new name

LOFARO joe.lofaro@metronews.c

Barrhaven councillor Jan Harder reinforced her stance against getting involved in a campaign to change the Nepean Redskins' team name at a public event Tuesday.

Ian Campeau, a local DJ and Ojibway of the Nipissing First Nation, says the Redskins football team name is racist and he has been trying to get the team to change it for the past year.

"I'm certainly not in a position to suggest that they change and I'm not going to," said Harder. "I don't believe it's racist."

She argued that if the name gets changed, then it would open up the door for other sports teams' names to be changed as well.

She also described the debate about whether the name is racist as "making a mountain out of a molehill," and said it would cost thousands of dollars to rebrand the team.

"They're a volunteer organization, and $130,000 for them or any of the other teams, which will be the next target, is a lot of money, and they're not going to be able to do it themselves," the councilor said.

An online petition calling for the name to be changed made its rounds across the web Tuesday, garnering at least 147 signatures by the early evening.

Meanwhile, the Assembly of First Nations weighed in on the issue and

Farmers hit by drought get a lift from Farm Aid festival

Don Foley, a farmer and chairman of the Ottawa Stadium Group, said he hopes to raise $100,000 for regional farmers hard hit by this summer's drought. GRAHAM LANKTREE/METRO

Ottawa farmers hard hit by summer drought will get some relief from Farm Aid, a country-music benefit concert whose profits will go to those suffering the most.

"We're going to get the farmers back on their feet with some cash," said Don Foley, chairman of the Ottawa Stadium Group. "Some of the farmers are really getting it rough. If you drive around the Ottawa Valley, you can see the damage."

The daylong event on Sept. 16 will bring Canadian country-music stars Paul Brandt, Emerson Drive and Michelle Wright to the stage along with host Wayne Rostad to entertain the crowd.

Foley, who has a 700-acre farm in Carp with 100 cattle and cash crops like corn and barley, said he knows the pain felt in the Valley this summer.

Only 12.7 mm of rain fell in July and 19.6 mm in June — the latter figure down sharply from June's normal average rainfall of 96 mm.

The shortage of rain affected corn and hay prices. In July, hay rocketed by as much as $30 to $40 a round bale to $100.

Event details

 The Sept. 16 event will include country music stars Paul Brandt, Emerson Drive and Michelle Wright.  Organizer Don Foley hopes the concert will draw 5,000 to 10,000 people and raise $100,000 to help local farmers.

Foley said he hopes the concert will draw 5,000 to 10,000 people and raise $100,000 to help local farmers. Some of the cash will go to farmers purchasing seed for 2013 and the rest to livestock farms battling inflated feed prices.

"They're not getting a lot. I just haven't heard it yet what (governments are) doing," he said. "This will put real money on the table."

New anguish over movie massacre

Fundraising furor.

Organizers trading on the memory of 'our murdered loved ones. emotional family members allege Anguished family members of victims of the Colorado movie massacre lashed out at organizers of a fundraising campaign Tuesday.

They claimed more than $5 million has been collected "using pictures and names of our murdered loved ones.'

But so far, they said, no more than $5,000 has been given to each of the families facing bills for medical treatment and other expenses.

The families also said they've been shut out of de-cisions on how the money should be spent and that fundraisers have been unresponsive to their questions and suggestions.

Norwegian PM apologizes for mistakes during massacre

Emergency response.

Government promises new plan to deal with crises after 500-page report exposes flaws

Norwegian Prime Minister Jens Stoltenberg on Tuesday apologized for flaws in the response to last year's bomband-gun rampage by a rightwing extremist who killed 77 people.

Stoltenberg also pledged sweeping measures to improve terror preparedness, telling lawmakers that the government will adopt an emergency plan to deal with crises. The plan entails establishing of a new emergency-response centre, improving co-operation between rescue teams and better flow of information between officials.

His address to Parliament came in the wake of a 500page report by a governmentappointed commission that exposed shortcomings in the Scandinavian country's crisis preparedness and highlighted police blunders dur-ing the July 22, 2011, attacks when Anders Behring Breivik gunned down 69 people on Utoya island after exploding a bomb in central Oslo, killing eight.

Breivik, who was convicted of terror and given a 21-year prison sentence that can be extended for as long as he's considered a threat to society, told the court that he had expected to be killed by police.

Instead, their bungled response allowed him to hunt down panicked teenagers on Utova for more than an hour before they arrested him.

On Tuesday, Stoltenberg conceded that as head of government he held the highest responsibility and that it had taken that responsibility and led the nation in the aftermath of the massacre.

Still, he conceded that mistakes had been made and, listing the main conclusions of the report, he said: "For this I apologize.

Jordan. 1,200 defectors housed in secret compound

In an isolated stretch of Jordanian desert, a heavily guarded, undisclosed compound houses 1,200 senior police and army officers who defected from nearby Syria.

The men live in trailers with fans but no air conditioning, surrounded by barbed wire, and they pass their days browsing the Internet and watching TV for news of Syria's civil war, longing to join the fight — but they are largely unable to leave.

The Jordanian military runs the camp near a site formerly used by the U.S. to train some of its forces for the war in Iraq, and the defectors are debriefed by intelligence agents. Access to them is tightly restricted for their own protection. They are even separated from their families, who live outside the camp near the northern border city of Mafraq but can get special police permits to visit.

The defectors in the camp are allowed to communicate with the rebel Free Syrian Army in Jordan and abroad, both in person and through telephone and Internet communications, but do not have

The facility is a sign of Jordan's growing role as a quiet supporter of Syria's opposition. But at the same time, Jordan wants to avoid aggravating tensions with its more powerful northern neighbour, fearing that President Bashar Assad may remain in power.

There are more than 160,000 Syrian refugees in Jordan, and their number is increasing by the thousands every day. About 8,000 live in a newly set up camp on the border, while the rest are scattered across Jordan.

Syrian opposition exiles pen plan for nation's democracy

Skeptics. Rebels and civilians doubt leaders' plan will effect change

In the foreign halls of power, the strategy is clear: Syria's opposition should unite to present an alternative to Bashar Assad's rule — a step France's president says would lead to diplomatic recognition.

As a move toward unity, Syrian exiles from the main opposition Syrian National Council and other groups unveiled a blueprint Tuesday in the German capital of Berlin for transition to a democratic, transparent society free of religious and ethnic favouritism.

But rebels and civilians in the bomb-shattered Syrian town of Azaz near the Turkish border view such talk as hollow. They are deeply skeptical of all exiled leaders and believe what really matters is their fight on the ground to overthrow the regime.

"They have never come up with a united position that will save the people," said Fadi Hajji, 25, who had been camped out along the Syrian border in Turkey with his wife and two infant daughters for five days. "All they are good at is arguing. They don't represent anyone here and they don't help."

With no end to the carnage in sight, French President Francois Hollande called on the Syrian opposition Monday to form a provisional government, saying France would recognize and support it.

Hollande's statement is believed to be the first of its kind.

Samsung facing a rethink following Apple patent verdict

'Fast follower.' South Korean tech giant must now figure out how to tackle the challenge of moving from imitation to innovation

A U.S. jury's $1-billion US verdict against Samsung for what rival Apple claimed was the illegal copying of its iPhone and iPad designs signals a turning point for the South Korean electronics giant known for its prowess in adapting the innovations of others and nimbly executing production.

The verdict not only jolted the world of global gadg-etry but also likely sparked some soul-searching in Suwon, South Korea, where the family-run Samsung conglomerate is based.

Samsung has long been regarded as a "fast follower" imitating or licensing technologies and then competing by lowering costs, improving quality and adding functions.

When Apple released its cutting-edge iPhone in 2007, Samsung employees were likely too pressed to catch up to scrutinize possible patent encroachments. South Korea's idea of intellectual property is also less strict than that in the U.S., and speedy execution is highly valued at Samsung.

Still, Samsung outsold Apple this year in smart-phones by offering more variety, including low-end for price-conscious consumers.

New U.S. fuel standards aim to double average gas mileage

The Obama administration has finalized new fuel economy rules that will require the fleetwide average of new cars and trucks sold in the U.S. to double over the next 13 years.

The average fuel economy must reach 54.5 miles (87.7 km) per gallon (3.8 liters) by 2025, up from 28.6 mpg at the end of last year.

The regulations will bring dramatic changes to the cars and trucks in U.S. showrooms, with the goal of cutting green-house gas emissions and fuel consumption.

To meet the standard, automakers will need to introduce new technology to improve gasoline-powered engines. And they'll need to sell more alternative fuel vehicles. Critics say the rules will add thousands to the price of new cars and make them unaffordable for many.

The administration says the latest changes will save families more than $1.7 trillion US in fuel costs and bring an average savings of $8,000 over the lifetime of a new vehicle sold in 2025. The standards also are the biggest step the U.S. government has ever taken toward cutting greenhouse gas emissions, Environmental Protec-

Fuel-efficient vehicles

By 2025, some bigger models may disappear, and dealers could offer more efficient gas-electric hybrids, naturalgas vehicles and electric cars.

There also will be smaller motors, lighter bodies and more devices to save fuel, such as circuits that temporarily shut off engines at traffic lights.

tion Agency Administrator Lisa Jackson said. Tailpipe emissions from cars and light trucks will be halved by 2025, the government said.

President Barack Obama said the new fuel standards "represent the single most important step" his administration has taken to reduce U.S. dependence on foreign oil.

The gas mileage requirements will be phased in gradually and get tougher starting in 2017. They build on a 2009 deal between the Obama administration and automakers that committed cars and trucks to average 35.5 mpg by model year 2016.

In the arcane world of government regulations, the rules don't mean that cars and trucks will average 54.5 mpg in 13 years. It's actually closer to 40 mpg in real-world driving.

The new rules were adopted after an agreement between the administration and 13 automakers last year. That's a change from the past, when automakers fought stricter fuel economy changes, saying it cost them too much to build vehicles to meet the stricter standards.

WHOSE IDEA WAS IT TO GIVE SMARTPHONES TO STUPID PEOPLE?

IUST SAYIN' Paul Sullivan metronews.ca/voices ust-saying

It happened overnight.

One day, people went about their business, sharp and alert, and then, the very next day, the streets and roads were filled with slack-jawed zombies peering into little screens, tapping compulsively on little keypads, oblivious to anyone and anything around them.

Smartphones have almost instantly turned us all, well, many of us anyway, into stupid people.

People who drive into each other at high speeds because

People who drive into each other at high speeds because they're too busy tapping LOL into their smartphones.

People who try to order lunch in a busy lineup at the same time agreeing with their girlfriend (who is somewhere else) that all men are, like, total potting soil.

People who block street corners and doorways and elevators, breathing through their mouths, inert.

Arrive alive: Think and drive

There's a story about a stupid man who was so busy downloading an app on his smartphone while he was driving that it wasn't until he got home, parked his van in the driveway and police came to his door that he learned he had run over a 300-pound man.

People who drop their smartphones into the urinal while updating their fantasy football roster.

People who go out for dinner and text each other across the table.

I could go on. In fact, I will. There's even a Facebook page called Smart Phones, Stupid People. And they're not kidding.

ding.

There's a story about a stupid man who was so busy downloading an app on his smartphone while he was driving that it wasn't until he got home, parked his van in the driveway and police came to his door that he learned he had run over a 300-pound man.

There's a photo of a truck with a message on the back: "Don't text and drive: Yours may be on the next shipment: Batesville Casket Company."

There's a story about how people with smartphones have become such a danger to themselves and others in Fort Lee, N.J., that the local police chief has officers ticketing people on the spot. He had to do something: There have already been 23 text-related pedestrian accidents since January.

And, finally, there's the story of the Stupidest Person Ever. A college student (named Chance, LOL) from Texas was driving when he texted to his friend: "I need to quit texting, because I could die in a car accident." He then immediately drove off a bridge and over a cliff. He suffered a broken neck, a crushed face, a fractured skull, and brain trauma. How could that be? He has no brain.

Believe it or not, distracted smartphone-related driving led to 3,000 road fatalities in the U.S. last year. If this keeps up, an entire generation will go over the cliff along with Chance.

At that point, the meek and a few others who can't afford a smartphone shall inherit the Earth.

At last, IMHO.

Lawless sees director John Hillcoat once more teaming up with cult gothic rock god Nick Cave for a violent, meandering, macho shoot em up. The results are less weighty than their previous Cave penned collaborations, Ghosts of the Civil Dead and The Proposition, in fact, despite the ample bloodshed and agony on screen, Lawless is actually kind of a — gasp — good time.

Not words you'd expect from the man who gave us the bleaker than death adaptation of The Road, but the film, which sees Shia LaBeouf as a gentle younger sibling to a fierce brood of prohibition era moonshiners is painted with such broad, arch strokes and is filled with such buoyant roots music that only the hardest heart wouldn't smile. There's equally fantastic performances from LaBeouf, Hillcoat regular Guy Pierce and especially, the imposing Tom Hardy, re-channelling his Bane character as a hardened, but gallant, thug with a moral code. Mixing action and even western tropes with fine, sepia soaked period detail, Lawless is one of the finest films of the year. CHRIS ALEXANDER

Scary? Yes, but don't call it a horror movie, actor says

The Possession.

New film more of a character piece, says Jeffrey Dean Morgan

NED EHRBAR

Metro World News in Hollywood

Jeffrey Dean Morgan is all for you getting scared watching The Possession — about a young girl who starts displaying disturbing behaviour after her family purchases an old Hebrew artifact — but it's not a horror movie, he swears.

Morgan, who plays the girl's beleaguered dad in the film, makes his pitch for The Possession as a character piece and offers some insight on why audiences can't get enough of exorcisms.

What was the initial draw for you for this project? Everybody wants to label this as a horror movie, and I never considered it to be a horror movie going in.

movie going in.

It actually had a story to it, and I'm so used to horror movies this day and age being found footage, shaky camera, just a f—ing visual onslaught of gore.

This movie actually had a story and it reminded me of the movies that I thought were scary — The Exorcist and Rosemary's Baby and The Omen — where you could become invested in those characters. This had that. (I play) a recently divorced guy trying to be a good father and sort of failing miserably with two teenage daughters.

So you've got a family that's kind of been troubled at the heart of this. And then of course there's demons inside people, so there's that (laughs).

But it's really, I think, a character piece. I think it really gives the opportunity for us to act and for (director) Ole (Bornedal) to direct, and that helps a great deal when doing this kind of thing.

Why do you think demonic possession continues to be such a popular topic for horror films?

Yeah, I mean people go see these movies, for sure. I don't know, I didn't ever really put it together but it's always the kid who gets possessed, and the parents are trying to, I guess, save the day — with a priest or a rabbi, I guess, in our case.

our case.

But I just think a child getting possessed is... what is more horrific for a parent than that? And I think that's something that maybe people can somehow relate to. And what 11-year-old girl isn't possessed?

Plus so many of them purport to be based on true stories

There is that element of it could happen, maybe. I'm a skeptic when it comes to all that paranormal activity and craziness and possession, but in doing the little bit of research that I did for this movie, there's some scary s— out there. You can see it on the Internet, actual exorcisms and stuff that have happened.

I've got to wonder how that is there. I mean, it doesn't look staged to me, and it's superscary. But I think there's that element that this could be a real thing. And people argue that it absolutely is a real thing, and I think because of that it's interesting subject matter.

island's traditional fare, head to the St Lawrence Gap's many restaurants where you can get a taste of dishes like cou cou with flying fish, the national dish of Barbados, officially. Un-officially, there's also favour-ites like macaroni pie, Bajan pepper sauce and Toronto chef Mark McEwan's pick: "fish sandwiches" or fish cutters, best experienced at Cuz's Fish Stand on Pebbles Beach near Bridgetown.

Then, there's the famous fish fry. At Oistins on Friday and Saturday nights, you can get the day's catch fried or grilled, with a beer in hand and island music in the air.

"Instead of going to a museum like you would in Europe, you've got to get to Oistins for a fish fry when you're in Barbados," says celeb chef Marcus Samuelsson, who, like McEwan can be seen on the island during the Barbados Food & Wine and Rum Festival.

Rum aficionados will not want to miss a visit to Mount Gay Distilleries, home to the world's oldest rum brand (since 1703), Mount Gay Rum.

For a more artisanal rum, visit St. Nicholas Abbey, home to an original 17th century plantation home and distillery where they sell an eight-year and 12-year old rum. Better yet, when you bring the bottle back to the distillery, they'll fill it up for you half price.

If you're vying for one final meal on the island, head to The Cliff Restaurant. Overlooking a private cove, watch the sun go down on the beachside patio with cock-tail in hand while the wave comes in under the glow of romantic lit torches, setting the stage for one of the finest upscale wining and dining experiences on the island.

Artist 'discovers' new way to view Christopher Columbus monument

Controversial vision.

Plan to build art installation around iconic statue in Manhattan draws criticism

A Japanese artist is inviting the public to have an intimate view of Christopher Columbus high above a hectic intersection in midtown Manhattan.

From athletic blog to journalism job

If you type it, the job may come.

Chris Lund's success story illustrates that pursuing your passion produces opportunity

DA SILVA-POWELL

Chris Lund graduated from Queen's University in 2011 with a range of experience more accustomed to someone many years his senior.

Only two months after graduation, he started a position as a web editor and writer for The Score Sports Network. managing the website's editorial content.

It's an entry-level job any sports journalist would jump

Chris hadn't cashed in on family connections; he hadn't lied on his numerous resumés: indeed, he isn't even a graduate of a journalism program.

And yet, despite Chris's uncommon track record with the written word, his journey begins with that most conventional of written modes - a

Humble beginnings

In July 2009, Chris and his friend Matt Piazza started a blog at AlwaysOUA.blogspot.

The duo were dissatisfied with the then-limited coverage of Ontario University Athletics

National media outlets pay little attention to varsity level game play, while university press departments generally focus on the prospects of their own teams.

"We didn't want what we thought were very entertaining and very competitive sports to go unnoticed," said Chris.

Original ideas are rare on the Internet. With millions of blogs online — over 100 million as of 2011 — it's safe to say that if you can think of a topic, someone is probably blogging about it already.
AlwaysOUA proved the ex-

Branching out

The blog suddenly filled a void for the OUA community.

"We had press credentials from pretty much every school and team in the province within our first month, just because teams are so willing to have extra coverage," said Chris. Close proximity to teams helped the pair develop interesting coverage while exploring different ways to raise the profile of OUA game play.

"We conducted polls asking students, 'How can we get you out to games?' and shared the results with schools and teams," Chris said.

Chris also submitted an oped piece to the Queen's University student newspaper, titled, We need to value our campus athletics, and put his mouth where his money was, taking the microphone as the sports director for Queen's campus radio station, CFRC-FM.

More than just a blog

Within a year, the blog started an opportunity snowball.

Chris was contacted by The Sports Network, who asked him to contribute to their University Rush blog. With his foot in the door, Chris began networking with professionals in his field and found himself in touch with a copy editor for The Hockey News, who referred him to the paper's editorial internship program. He started in May 2011.

"The Hockey News is the premier publication for the sport. NHL players have sub-scriptions. If it says it in there, it matters," said Chris.

With his experience in writing, editing and public relations. Chris set his sights on a full-time job when a web editor position at The Score crossed his desk.

With his track record for dedicated work at the grassroots level and beyond, it's no surprise he got the job.

Back to basics

Now 22, Chris has a LinkedIn profile with a volume of qualifications and experience that most of us hope to have in five years — with luck.

He maintains that his accomplishments all began with his work in blogging.

"When the blog started getting attention from other writers and schools, I had a moment where I thought, 'I can do this.' That was the moment I realized that this work is what

Words of wisdom

Chris was fortunate in finding an unfulfilled niche in the blogosphere, but his success also took a great deal of persever-ance and dedication. His experience yields some excellent advice.

"With the advent of online media like blogging, there is an overwhelming amount of competition but there are also an overwhelming number of opportunities to get experience and to get noticed," he said.

I want to do for a living."

Pin down your dream job

An interest in Pinterest. How to use this ultra-connected corkboard to land a job

ISHANI

Sure, Pinterest is great for finding recipes, wedding dresses and learning how to make your own deodorant, but this visually driven social media can also help you find a job.

In an age where professional Facebook pages and Twesumes are becoming regular additions to job applications, having a professional Pinterest account can help vou stand out from the rest of the online crowd.

For those who aren't familiar with the site, Pinterest allows its users to set up an online page and post original and shared content in the form of photos, much like you would pin something to a cork-board. The photo layout of the site makes it easy for readers to get a lot of information in a small amount of space.
Pinterest can be a great way to showcase your skills to potential employers, especially if you're in creative or marketing fields.

Create a resumé and portfolio on Pinterest

According to Pinterest's Pin Etiquette, boards are intended to be authentic reflections of each user. And with more than six million users, including major companies, you're showcasing who you are to a big audience.

Creating a professional Pinterest board for your resumé and work portfolio can showcase your skills, talent and creativity to potential employers.

Marketing expert Christo-pher Penn says, "The key to figuring out how to present effectively on Pinterest is to present visually even for nonvisual stuff."

Instead of just telling people you're gutsy, pin a photo of you sky diving to your Pinterest resumé board with the caption "Skydiving? Risk taker." That's exactly what Harvard business school graduate Jeanne Hwang did. Jeanne used her board to showcase her previous jobs, her interests and even a picture of her puppy.

While you can, and should, get creative with what goes on your board, headlines. Titling your boards 'Resumé' or 'Portfolio' makes it clear what the purpose of your board is and makes it easier to find if employers are searching around.

Missing the target: Hiring with bias

Asad G. Hussain Student European Business School, EBS Universität für Wirtschaft und Recht (Germany) Brock University

I recently moved to Germany on a competitive dual degree program offered by Brock University. Although fortunate to have received entrance into the program, I was somewhat hesitant knowing that I would be missing recruiting season in September. Apart from being abroad during recruiting season, a more significant obstacle that I encountered was employers wanting to largely, if not only, recruit from 'target schools'. All of the companies that I applied to had a recruiting process set up on campus at target schools, and little or no resources dedicated for external applicants from 'non-target schools'. Most companies I contacted, simply directed me to an online process from which I never heard back. Knowing that I am a high caliber student, I felt largely disadvantaged simply knowing that my application wouldn't receive as much attention based on my skills, experiences and achievements, and would rather skim me out based on the university that I attended.

Where I am now

At the moment, I am completing my last year at the European Business School, EBS Üniversität für Wirtschaft und Recht in Germany, with a specialization in International Business and Strategic Man-

My recommendations for employers, schools and career centres

Based on this experience, I would encourage employ-ers to invest resources and efforts not only to recruit from 'target schools', but also in a process which allows high-caliber students from 'non-target' schools to have a fair, if not equal, chance at employment opportunities. By doing this, employers will not only have the ability to recruit and retain top talent based largely on academic merit, but also based on skill, experience and the potential of candidates from these 'non-target'

My recommendations for students

As overall advice to students who are applying to companies who do not target their schools for recruitment, I would say that networking is the key! There are plenty of ways you can differentiate vourself from those candidates that do attend target schools. The first step is to establish a brand for yourself. Understand your strengths and your areas of interest, and use that to develop a strong application. Once you have perfected your application and the personal brand message that you want to be represented by, start contacting recruiters! This can be through attending networking events on and off-campus, looking up recruiter contact information on company directories, as well as introducing yourself to recruiters on LinkedIn.

Raonic overcomes serving issues to advance to Round 2

Tennis. Canadian earns hard-fought five-set victory despite bevy of unforced errors

Milos Raonic had trouble at the baseline, but still got his first U.S. Open victory.

The Thornhill native overcame 55 unforced errors including 15 double faults on Tuesday to defeat Santiago Giraldo of Colombia 6-3, 4-6, 3-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Raonic, the No. 15 seed, earned his 34th victory of the season in a match that lasted well over three hours.

"I'm just happy with the outcome and that I managed to make the most of that moment and just find a way to win," said Raonic. "Everything else I've got to hope gets better in the next round."

Raonic had 30 aces, but struggled with unforced errors and converted on only a third of his dozen break points.

"I don't think I struggled with my serve that much in a long, long time. A lot of double faults, and it wasn't just one double fault per game," said Raonic. "I double-faulted consistently a couple times in a row, and that made my job a Raonic did not play at the U.S. Open in 2011 as he recovered from hip surgery. In 2010 as a qualifier, he was beaten by Australian Carsten Ball in his debut at a major.

On Tuesday, Raonic found himself down 2-1, but tied the match with a break in the final game of the fourth set as Giraldo fired wide.

The match finished with a Raonic break of Giraldo on a forehand error from the Colombian.

He will play Paul-Henri Mathieu of France for the first time in the second round of the tournament.

NHL makes new offer to the players

Gary Bettman believes the NHL took a "significant" step with the counter-proposal it presented in the latest round of collective bargaining.

The commissioner laid out the details of a new offer to the NHL Players' Association on Tuesday morning and later told reporters that it was an improvement from the initial offer put forth by the NHL last month.

"We believe that we made a significant, meaningful step," said Bettman.

Neither side would discuss specific elements of the new deal. NHLPA executive director Donald Fehr gave an initial Quoted response to the league on Tuesday afternoon and requested that the parties gather again Wednesday after the union has had more time to examine it.

"It's a proposal that we intend to respond to," said Fehr. "I'll leave it at that."

The current collective agreement expires Sept. 15 and the NHL has said it will lock the players out if a new deal isn't reached by then.

The owners and players have had trouble getting on the same page. Bettman indicated the league's new offer was a direct counter-proposal to the offer the players put forth two weeks ago and hopes it helps spark negotiations.

"I'm trying to get us on to the same page, I'm trying to get us on to a common language," he said.

The proposal was unveiled in an intimate setting, with only Fehr and top assistant Steve Fehr in the room for the players and Bettman and deputy commissioner Bill Daly for the league. The morning meeting lasted about 45 minutes and concluded with Donald Fehr saying he wanted to apprise his constituents of the situation.

About four hours later, the Fehr brothers returned to the NHL's head office along with players Mathieu Darche, Ron Hainsey and Douglas Murray.

The afternoon session was

Want a minivan alternative?

LL PHOTOS WHEELBASE

Engine

A 2.4-litre four-cylinder produces 174 horsepower and 171 pound-feet of torque. It's connected to a six-speed manual transmission or optional six-speed automatic. Shifting your own gears results in optimum fuel economy: 10.1 l/100 km in the city and 6.7 on the highway, which is slightly better than 10.6/6.9 rating with the automatic.

Trim options

The $21,500 (including destination charges) base LS doesn't stray too far from basic, but spending an extra $2,300 for the 1LT trim adds air conditioning, cruise control, tilt/telescoping steering, floor console and upgraded seat coverings.

Versatility

The basic platform is shared with Chevrolet's Cruze sedan, although the Orlando is somewhat longer and wider overall and features an extra 7.5 centimetres between the front and rear wheels.

That added distance is the key to the Orlando's versatility. Three rows of seats come standard on all trim levels, including a 60:40 split-folding three-place second row and a 50:50 split-folding two-passenger third row that's more kid friendly than anything. Both second- and third-rows can be folded completely flat, creating a cavernous cargo hold that can swallow nearly any big-box-store item you would care to haul home.

For smaller items there are plenty of handy storage spots to be found throughout the cabin.

2012 Chevrolet Orlando

Review. It carries plenty, without costing plenty

MALCOLM GUNN

Wheelbase Medi

Canadians should be grateful that General Motors has brought the Chevrolet Orlando to this country.

That's because, for some reason, Chevy fans and dealers south of the border are going without this practical and affordable wagon that hails from GM's Korean subsidiary. Named for a city in Florida, but won't be available there?

Interesting.

The Orlando (perhaps the Saskatoon or the Halifax might have made better names) slots directly below the five-seat Equinox and well below the full-size Traverse in Chevrolet's tall-wagon hierarchy.

This junior-sized, frontwheel-drive space maker is an ideal minivan alternative. Its seven-passenger capacity is a match for most vehicles in the people-mover class, albeit in a tighter package for people and goods. But the Orlando actually competes against the Mazda 5, Kia Rondo and Dodge Journey. This trio also offers three-row seating and all but only the Journey can be ordered with optional all-wheel-drive.

The Orlando might have far offshore roots, but from its prominent Chevrolet "bowtie" brand on the grille to its rear liftgate, this wagon is definitely domestically influenced. In particular the side view appears inspired by the bigger Traverse, especially the wide doors and the upsweep of the roof pillar. The characteradding flared-out fenders and full-length roof rails also help make the vehicle appear larger than it actually is.

With its up-front costs within reach of most Canadian families, the Orlando should easily make the active-consideration list. Feeling sorry for our Orlando-less American neighbours comes at no extra charge.

With both the second and third rows folded flat, the wide door opening allows for reasonably large items to fit inside.

World's yardstick for performance, the Nürburgring, caught in the crossfire of promises gone bad, strange business model ideas and a government that's had enough of pouring money in 'The Green Hell'

TODD D. BURLAGE Wheelbase Media

Former Formula One driver Sir Jackie Stewart called it "The Green Hell" for a reason. It's tough and dangerous. But the Nürburgring might have earned the name lately for a completely different reason. The wrong reason. It's a money pit.

It's a story of bad busi-

It's a story of bad business, angry locals, bribery allegations, and more twists and bends than the 174 turns once featured on the same Nürburgring racetrack all this intrigue surrounds.

this intrigue surrounds.

The Nürburgring is a legendary motorsports complex built around the village of Nürburg, in the Eifel Mountains of West Germany.

It was once the thriving standard of road racing and a familiar home to the Formula One German Grand Prix and has become the performance yardstick for many automakers around the world. But major changes to the iconic racetrack and a failed business plan have recently driven this once proud facility into bankruptcy, putting the 85-year-old complex in jeopardy.

According to multiple reports, the Nürburgring — which is 90 per cent owned by the state government in Rhineland-Palatinate faces a debt of 300 million euros ($365 million) after major and costly renovations in 2009 didn't generate the necessary revenue to meet loan payments.

The German state tried to avoid bankruptcy for its track in July, or at least buy a little time, by filing for an emergency loan of 13 million euros ($15.8 million) from the European government. But with the European economy currently running on financial fumes, the European Commission denied the request and state governor, Ken Beck, conceded the inevitable.

"There is a high probability of insolvency (July 2012) due to a lack of liquidity."

What all of this means to the future of Nürburgring and its place as a Formula One site remains uncertain and impossible to predict, but looking back to how the racing complex went from invincibility to insolvency is a necessary step before looking forward.

Opening in 1927, the original Nürburgring course featured four different layouts — the longest being 28 kilometres — to accommodate different racing

Automakers such as Nissan use their Nürburgring lap times to benchmark themselves against Corvette and Viper. Will they have to find someplace else to play with series. Because it was considered the most demanding, treacherous and difficult racing circuit in the world, Nürburgring earned the nickname "The Green Hell" from Stewart.

Other than a few tweaks and some safety improvements, Nürburgring remained relatively unchanged until 1970 when the track was made straighter, smoother, shorter, slower and safer, much to the dismay of the locals who found the new configuration to be too "user friendly."

Nürburgring became a regular stop on the Formula One circuit in 1951 and remained one until 1976, when the German Grand Prix was moved to Hockenheimring in Hockenheim, Germany, for every year between 1977 and 2006, save for 1985.

and 2006, save for 1985.

And while Nürburgring lost its hold on the Formula One race, public events and other racing initiatives kept the track solvent and stable until a bold and expensive decision in 2004 to undergo massive renovations became the first domino to bankruptcy.

Hoping to generate revenue from non-motorsport promotions in the area, grandiose plans emerged to build an amusement park, shopping mall and hotel on Nürburgring property, further irritating racing purists and the local fan base.

According to a story on caranddriver.com, shady investors promised to support the project, but never delivered on the funds, putting a $610 million financial burden on the state government. The spending spree was finally put to an end in July when, after three years, it became clear the redevelopment projects that were completed in 2009 would never generate enough revenue to stay current on the loans.

Ironically, 2009 was the same year the German Grand Prix returned — after a 20-year absence — to Nürburgring in an agreement with Hockenheimring to alternate the race each year between the two venues. Sharing the race would help ease the financial burden for

The most wonderful time of the year

Autopilot

PILOT
Mike Goetz
drive@metronews.ca

Last week of summer. A joyous time for parents with school-age kids.

Two reasons to give thanks.

One, it's great to see their good times come crashing down — they had it too good for too long.

Two, it's another poign-

Two, it's another poignant reminder that your own school days are mercifully over, and you won't be the one heading out the door next Tuesday with a bad lunch and an over-stuffed backpack.

School isn't all bad, of course. And if you're the type that gets an extra kick from things automotive, then high school was, or will be, a heady time.

An automotive restorer once told me that, almost without fail, a guy would restore and/or buy a particular model of classic car later in life, based on their firstever car lust, which usually occurred when they were 12 to 14.

The cool cars they saw then on the road, and envisioned themselves behind the wheel of, will remain the coolest cars ever made, in their opinion.

So just think of the young brains that are getting programmed for life right now, by their first in-the-flesh encounters with something like an Audi R8, Lamborghini Aventador, or McLaren MP4-12C.

High school is also when a lot of kids first learn to drive, and possibly get their own cars. (There was one memorable guy in my Grade 8 class who not only had his licence, but also his own car, which he drove to school, and parked in the same lot as the teachers! Obviously this was an era in which you were actually allowed to fail an elementary grade.)

My parents wouldn't allow me to purchase my own car in high school, on the premise that I had no business owning a car, when all I wanted to do with one is drive around town playing 8-track tapes. It was a particularly hurtful thing to say because it was 100 per cent accurate.

I guess the most iconic school-related vehicle is the yellow school bus. Progress marches on, but the school bus seems resistant to change.

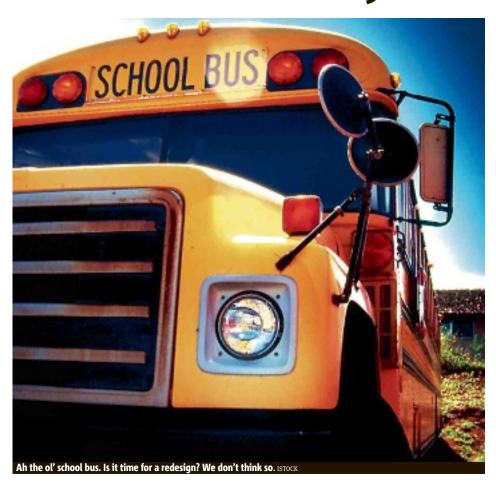

In that regard, they're much like that Coke-Pepsi line. All sorts of cultural walls have come down, but you still can't get Coke and Pepsi together in the same eating or drinking establishment. It's one or the other folks...

But back to school buses. They haven't changed much because they continue to have a great safety record.

Yes, they look antiquated, but their serious "mass" and serious "yellowness" make them very visible and very energy absorbent. And with the seats so tight together, and with padding on the seat backs, the kids don't get thrown around too much when things get hairy.

Drivers are also highly trained working on familiar routes, and they're usually only on the road in daylight hours.

Almost makes you wish you could get back on one, eh?

Subaru's EyeSight is watching out for you

Driving Force. Safety feature is 'like a fighter jet targeting system' that will help you avoid collisions

JIL MCINTOSH

It never hurts to have an extra pair of eyes watching the road. That's the idea behind Subaru's new EyeSight system, an affordable package of safety technologies that uses a unique stereo camera mounted at the top of the windshield.

"This is the first system of its kind to be introduced on Subaru," says Frederick Lane, specialist for technical training at Subaru Canada. "It incorporates seven safety features, including active safety, preventative safety, and passive safety."

EyeSight uses two chargecoupled device (CCD) cameras, developed by Subaru, which capture an image and turn it into electrical pulses that the system can recognize. The system processes these stereo images to identify vehicles, obstacles, traffic lanes and other tems. By using images, the system doesn't just realize objects are up ahead, but can accurately identify them.

"Radar (systems) knov

there's something there, but can't figure out what it is," Lane says. "EyeSight is like a fighter jet targeting system, figuring out how much of a threat an object is."

It can also accurately determine how far away each object is.

"It captures images from the left and right cameras and will compare the contrast change from left to right, and figure out how many pixels are in between the distance," Lane says. "That's how it views obstacles and how far away they

eras, the EyeSight system provides adaptive cruise control, which keeps a pre-set distance from vehicles ahead; lane departure and sway warning, which beeps a warning if the driver crosses a line without signalling, or swerves back and forth through inattention or fatigue; and pre-collision braking and collision mitigation, applying the brakes to either slow or stop if there's something ahead and the driver isn't reacting.

The system will beep a warning at a stoplight if the car in front of you moves and you don't, in case you're lost in thought when the light turns green. It is capable of recognizing pedestrians, bicycles and motorcycles, and will slow down or stop the vehicle if the driver doesn't respond to potential danger.

EyeSight will also dramatically reduce the throttle's effectiveness if the gas pedal is activated when something is in the way. This could prevent mishaps when a driver mistakenly puts the car into Drive, instead of Reverse, in front of a garage door or parking barrier.

The new system will be available on select trim lines of the 2013 Subaru Legacy and Outback.

Big hopes for real-world experiment

Put to the test.

U.S. government and University of Michigan hope to make roads safer with cars that can talk to each other

In a few weeks, about 2,800 cars, trucks and buses will start talking to each other on the streets of Ann Arbor, Mich., in a giant experiment that U.S. government officials are hoping will lead to safer roads.

Wireless devices will allow the vehicles to send signals to each other, warning their drivers of potential dangers such as stopped traffic or cars that might be blowing through a red light. They can even get traffic lights to turn green if no cars are coming the other way.

The U.Š. Department of Transportation and the University of Michigan are hoping the year-long, $25 million project generates data that show the devices can cut down on traffic crashes.

Officials say eventually this could lead to the devices going in every car. About 500 vehicles with the devices are now on the roads. That will rise to 2,800 in about

Group effort

Ford, General Motors, Honda, Hyundai/Kia, Mercedes-Benz, Nissan, Toyota and Volkswagen/ Audi all are supplying vehicles and taking part in the Ann Arbor, Mich., test.

six weeks, officials said last week.

"This is a big day for safety," Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood said at an event at the university formally kicking off the experiment.

"We'll use this information to decide if vehicle technology can be applied to daily lives "

More than 32,000 people died last year in U.S. traffic crashes, down 1.7 per cent from 2010. The number of crashes has fallen in recent years as automakers added safety devices such as air bags, antilock brakes and stability control, which helps drivers keep cars under control in emergency situations.

But LaHood said that 80 per cent of crashes in which the drivers aren't impaired by drugs or alcohol could be prevented — or the severity reduced — if cars could talk to each other.

When the technology will make its way into cars and trucks everywhere is unclear. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has the authority to order the devices placed in all new cars, but LaHood said they'll have to study the data before making any decision. The data will be available in about a year.

In a demonstration at the Transportation Research Institute, a Volkswagen GTI equipped with a device got a signal that a car up ahead of it had braked. The warning allowed the GTI driver to slow down before seeing the brake lights on the car in front of him. The device also warned the GTI driver at a stop sign that another car was about to speed through the intersection.

Peter Sweatman, director of the institute, said testers will look for data showing that the warnings prevented crashes. Previous tests, on a smaller scale, showed the devices can stop crashes, he said

Technology is available so that connected cars could be on the road nationwide in under 10 years, Sweatman said

"I think this is going to kick everything off," he said. "This is going to move everything forward."

Motorcycle tips for wet weather

While most motorcyclists live for cruising the open road in warm and sunny weather, there are times when the rain clouds roll in and you have to navigate your way through wet and slippery conditions.

If you get stuck in a downpour, consider the following safety tips from Dave Minor, vice president at TD Insurance, to ensure you arrive safely at your destination:

Back to the basics

Sit deep in the seat and rest your hands on the bars without gripping them too tightly. It's important to remember to relax, be alert and slow down. Give yourself plenty of extra time to get to your destination, and leave extra space between you and other vehicles.

Wear the proper gear

If the rain is coming down hard, you'll need a visor to maintain good, clear vision. Be careful, as poor-quality visors can fog up in the rain. Invest in a good quality pair of goggles and consider an anti-fogging liquid to keep in your bike.

Watch out for slipperv surfaces

Steel is the most slippery surface on wet roads, so try to avoid hazards likes manhole covers and streetcar tracks. Also be aware of painted lines on the road — these too are slippery when wet. When you do come upon these slippery surfaces, slow down and stay loose, or pull over to a safe location. If the bike slides while you're stiff, the slide will be amplified, so do your best to

Braking

The best way to brake quickly in the rain is to progressively squeeze the brake. Do not brake abruptly. Any sudden force on the wheel will cause a break in traction with the

With practice, it is possible to brake quickly using this technique. Ease off the brake if you feel jerking, to prevent
